Trends in Higher Education

Higher education is constantly changing. With a new governor, changes in both state and national policy, increased demand for a college educated work force, changes in consumer behavior and changing demographics, how can you make sense of it all? Will recent high school graduates stay in California or go elsewhere? How does financial aid policy fit into the mix? And how can we look at all of these factors to create policies and outreach efforts that will support institutional goals? Come hear about some of the latest studies and trends in these areas and be ready to think about how you can bring this information back to your campus to influence your own policies.

Speakers: Nadia Almaguer, Grossmont College
Michele Toral, Grossmont College

Session E7 – Raincross B, Upper Concourse

10 Common Questions Schools Have About Federal Program Reviews

The U.S. Department of Education (ED) performs program reviews to identify whether a school is abiding by the provisions governing Title IV aid programs, and if not, ED can impose hefty financial fines and liabilities against the school. This danger of financial ramifications may lead schools to fear program reviews, but you don't have to. Learn about the types of reviews, potential triggers for being selected for a review, the financial ramifications, and more.

Moderator: Crystal Delong, Citizens One Student Loans
Speakers: Mandy Sponholtz, NASFAA
Deborah Agee, University of California, Davis

Session E8 – Raincross D, Upper Concourse The Care and Feeding of Your Career

Session E11 – Meeting Room 8, Upper Concourse 7 Weird Ways Students Are Paying for School

Where do your students turn when they have unexpected higher education bills they can't pay? Many drop out, taking debt with them but no degree. While others turn to part-time jobs and side hustles, the truth can be scarier (and sometimes funnier) than you realize: many are turning to weird, wacky ways to raise a few bucks. With 55% of students reporting they've run out of money three or more times in the past year, it's no wonder they're getting creative—and sometimes turning to questionable methods. From selling body parts (eek!) to entering eating contests, join this session to learn about seven weird ways students are paying for school, the potential wins and risks associated with them, and innovative, safe alternatives in use at schools nationwide. Session F5 – Raincross C/F, Upper Concourse How the New Tax Code is Impacting Financial Aid

Most of the changes to the tax code enacted in December, 2017, were implemented in the 2018 tax year. And financial aid officers will begin to see these changes as they review income-adjustment based professional judgments. This session will take a look at the changes that will most impact financial aid eligible families, and any guidance the Department of Education has issued related to these changes. Topics covered will include the new Form 1040, the elimination of Forms 1040A and 1040EZ and its impact on a student's eligibility for the simplified EFC or Auto Zero EFC formula, and how changes in the tax code may change students' EFCs, ability to finance their education, and meet their financial obligations to their schools.
